After a brief awards ceremony – Dan Tangherlini will “flip the switch” to illuminate the festive lights that will outline our boathouse during the holiday season. Several other yacht clubs and marinas located along the Anacostia will be illuminating their buildings too. Similar to Boathouse Row in Philadelphia, the lights will add a unique look to the Anacostia River's nighttime skyline.

This will be a special event and we hope you can join us!

The Anacostia Community Boathouse Association (“ACBA”), a nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization run solely by volunteers, is dedicated to safe and environmentally responsible recreation on the Anacostia River through the establishment of a community boathouse located at 11th and “O” Streets in Southeast Washington, D.C. ACBA provides opportunities for non-motorized recreational water activities, such as rowing and paddling, through its ten member organizations, which include four high schools, a university, four community-based clubs, and an environmental organization. In partnership with the D.C. Government, the National Park Service, other riverfront projects and interested community members, ACBA is working to improve its boathouse facilities for the diverse communities along the Anacostia River and in the greater metropolitan Washington area.
